1. On 22 August 1951 a serious train accident took place in the vicinity of Ovca, Yugoslavia. It was considered beyond doubt an act of sabotage because the rails had been dug up and raised just prior to the accident. The Yugoslav press gave another account of the accident, avoiding any mention of sabotage.
2. On 2 September 1951 a freight train carrying a shipment of sugar beets was derailed in the same locality. There was very little damage.
